AN ORIENTAL MIX UP

THE STORY OF AN APPOINTMENT TO A JUDGESHIP.

How the Man Slated For Associate Justice of New Mexico's Supreme Court First Got a Surprise and Afterward the Office.

Late in the year 1900 it was decided by the powers in Washington that Mr. Daniel H. McMillan, ex-state senator of New York and for many years general counsel in the city of Buffalo for the Vanderbilt system of railroads, was to be appointed associate justice of the supreme court of New Mexico.

This appointment had been urged not | tor of the United Presbyterian church, only by those who knew Mr. McMillan in the state of New York, but by lawyers of Santa Fe and of other cities in New Mexico who knew of him and desired to see him obtain the place.

Toward the close of 1900, with Governor Otero of the territory, Mr. Mc-Millan was on a Lake Shore train flower girl, Miriam Glasgow. Miss speeding toward Washington. When Harriet Junkin, sister of the groom, the train stopped at Painesville, O., played Mendelssohn's wedding march. newsboys boarded it, and one of them called out: "All about the new supreme court judge of New Mexico. Silas Alexander appointed." The governor of the territory and Mr. McMillan looked at each other, and they bought a paper, and in that paper they read in glaring headlines that Silas Alexander of Santa Fe had received the appointment to the vacant judgeship.

Mr. McMillan the morning of his arrival in the capital went at once to the office of the secretary of war.

"How did it happen I was not appointed?" he asked.

"Why," said Mr. Root, "you are appointed!" "Why," said Mr. McMillan, "you are mistaken." And he drew from his pocket the Cleveland newspaper of the day before. Secretary Root turned all colors. "This is a mistake," he said; "an absurd, strange mistake, for I bave it from the president's own lips, corroborated by Mr. Griggs, attorney general, that your name was sent yesterday to the senate for action and that the recommendation was duly signed A Helena Man Laid Up As a Result by President McKinley." Then the men went to the state, war and navy building and found Attorney General Griggs. "But you have been given the appointment," said Mr. Griggs. "Then what does this newspaper re port mean?" was the reply.

The attorney general was dumfound ed. "I cannot conceive what it means," he said. The clerk appeared. "Mr. Blank," said the attorney general, "find out at once whose name was sent yesterday to the senate with the recommendation by the president that he be appointed associate justice of the supreme court of New Mexico."

"I will look." said the clerk. He soon returned with a memorandum slip in his hand.

"Mr. Alexander," he said-"the man from Buffalo.' Then a glimmering of the truth dawned upon the group. "Are you sure," said Attorney General Griggs, "that the name was not McMillan?" "Certainly," was the reply. "The name was Silas Alexander.' The situation was remarkable, and time was important. The president of the United States had inadvertently, by the error of a subordinate, been made to set aside the man whom he had intended to name. There came a pause. Mr. Grigge broke the silence. "Well, gentlemen," he said, "the fat My subordinate has made this mistake, and I must do my best to get it rectified, and perhaps the fault is partly mine, for I told him to fill in the name of 'the Buffalo man,' and he, probably, seeing the name Alexander and identifying it with the congressman of the same name prominently known in Washington as coming from Buffalo, thought that he was to be the appointee." And so the three men went to the president and explained matters, and ed by a telephone message, sped rapidly toward the capitol with instructions to seek immediately the leader of the senate and prevent any action on the mistaken nomination and to make the Gentlemen-I have been troubled statement to that leader that it was withdrawn.

The messenger arrived just as the senate was about to take action, and if the telephone had been relied upon the nomination of Silas Alexander would a trial bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup have been confirmed by the United States senate, and the will of the president of the republic would have been defeated .- Saturday Evening Post.

"Well, gentlemen," he said, "the fat is in the fire, but we must get it out. Frank Carman, of Independence, My subordinate has made this mistake, and I must do my best to get it rectified, and perhaps the fault is partly mine, for I told him to fill in the name of 'the Buffalo man,' and he, probably, seeing the name Alexander and identifying it with the congressman of the same name prominently known in Washington as coming from Buffalo, thought that he was to be the appointee."

And so the three men went to the president and explained matters, and turned to the East End with him and as a consequence a messenger, precedwill remain here on a visit of a week ed by a telephone message, sped rapidly toward the capitol with instructions to seek immediately the leader of the senate and prevent any action on the mistaken nomination and to make the Gentlemen-I have been troubled statement to that leader that it was

LOWARY-JUNKIN

A Wedding at High Noon of Prominent Wellsville Young People.

Today at high noon at the bride's home on Main street occurred one of the prettiest weddings of the year. The contracting parties were Miss Bertha Edna Lowary and James Louis Junkin. Rev. W. M. Glasgow, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony.

Miss Adelaide Endley, of Lisbon was bridesmaid and C. H. Lowary brother of the bride, was best man As sweet as the flowers she strewed along the bridal path was the little flower girl, Miriam Glasgow. Miss Harriet Junkin, sister of the groom played Mendelssohn's wedding march.

Only the immediate families and relatives were present. The out of town guests were the Misses Sterling and Endley, of Lisbon, and Mrs. Eliza Abrams and Miss Lavina Azdell, of East Liverpool.

The house was decorated in pink and white. The flowers were principally roses. The mantel of the room in which the ceremony took place was one mass of roses, laurel and ferns. The young couple will leave for a trip to Cleveland and other points tonight. They will live in their new home on Commerce street.

Mr. Junkin has long been in the office of the railroad company here. He is a member of the United Presbyterian church and is very well known in the city. Miss Lowary, in the few years that she has taught school, has gained the affection of the pupils and the respect of the board of education. She is also a member of the United Presbyterian church.

OBJECT TO THE BELLS

Wellsville Pastors and People May Stop the Ringing on Sunday.

There is a movement on foot among the members of the First Presbyterian, United Presbyterian and Methodist Episcopal churches to stop the ringing of the bells of these churches on Sunday morning. The three churches are situated very close to each other. The Sunday morning church services begin at the same time in all of them, and the clanging why he did not pay it all, as I knew he of bells makes a fearful din. To some of the people the tone of the bells is very sweet, but sick persons dread the time when the bells are to ring. Complaint has been made several times. .The pastors of the three churches are not willing that any should suffer and they have all said that if the people desire it they have no objection to stopping ringing. The matter may come up before the boards of the several churches soon.

Holding His Job For Him,

"Of all the excuses I have ever heard from people for not paying their bills," said a collector for a prominent firm the other day, "I got the neatest today from a very wealthy man who always owes the house a bill. No matter whether the bill is for $10 or $100, he always pays $5. I have gone back the next week and got $5 more, and once I went back twice in one week, and he paid me $5 each time and seemed glad to see me. I got to know him pretty well, and the other day I asked him had the money."

"'Well,' said the old fellow, 'if I pay you everything I owe you at one time you will collect so fast that pretty soon you will be out of a job for the want of something to collect.'

"I don't know whether that was his reason or not, but I let the subject drop and am just going around there now for another $5."-Memphis Scimitar.

The New Woman

BY ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER

BROAD smile must certainly be illuminating the collective countenance of this country over the common law marriage act passed by the New York legislature at its recent session. At least if there is not a broad smile there ought to be. Men complained that the old common law marriage gave opportunities to unprincipled women for blackmail. Thereupon the lawmakers at Albany put on their wisest spectacles and proceeded to remedy things. The law which is the combined result of their grave debliberations is in brief as follows: Any man and woman who, Quaker fashion, in the presence of witnesses, shall deplare their intention to be husband and wife and shall thereafter live as such shall be so regarded by the law withsealed and witnessed, of their said intention to be man and wife. Now, look you, if before the expiration of the six months the record has not been filed then the marriage is null and void-is off, in short. The man may go free, so likewise may the woman, and both The 100th anniversary of the settling may take other partners as if they had can get rid of the woman, so, on the other hand, can the woman also get rid of the man if she does not like him after six months' trial. In their wildest dreams social revolutionists and anarchists never perpetrated any more radical marital scheme than this which has just come out under the hands of the solons of New York, to this day one of the most difficult states of the Union in which to obtain divorce. When you wish to discover a perfectly awful bad break, watch men-men always.

Among other things to which the twentieth century will point with pride will be the improved physical status of civilized women. The consumptive, protected female heroine is already rapidly giving place to the heroine who can protect herself. Woman's physical weakness is a gigantic blunder to be blamed not on the Creator, but on woman herself and on man, who has encouraged her in it. While man has moved heaven and earth to develop and improve himself physically woman has simply let herself slump along, flabby of muscle and growing flabbier. Now the tide is the other way, the gods be praised, and woman has discovered she, too, has muscles and mind. CHILDREN'S NERVES.

They Have a Marked Effect Both on Their Looks and Dispositions.

Nervousness is a childish ailment which masquerades under a variety of names, naughtiness being the one most in use. If the cases of any ten so called intractable children were to be investigated, long school hours, improper food or lack of outdoor exercise would be found the trouble with at least nine of them.

These things all affect the nerves, although the symptoms are different in different children. The high spirited ones indulge in mischievous pranks which drive their elders almost distracted. "I can't imagine what is the matter with Tommy," said a young schoolteacher. "He is tractable enough during the morning, but along toward the middle of the afternoon he begins to 'cut up' as if a demon of mischief possessed him." I remembered the case of another child. He also was considered unmanageable until the doctor suggested shorter school hours, less night study and a chance to indulge in out of door sports. After a month of the new order of affairs the change in his disposition surprised every one.

In girls nervousness shows itself differently. They bite their nails and their lips, and more than one girl student has spoiled her good looks for life little tricks of this sort. A schoolmate of mine was in the habit of rolling down her lower lip with her pencil while she studied. As a result it acquired an ugly droop which she could never get rid of. Another girl found it impossible to study unless she twisted and pulled a short lock on her right temple. The result was peculiar. The lock turned a decided gray after a couple of years, and when she went to a specialist to find the reason why he traced it directly to her nervous trick.

As for the cases where children's nails and lips are daily bitten to the quick, they are so common that they are scarcely worth mentioning. It is noticeable, however, that the moment perience her husband had in the realms these girls begin their vacations their nervous habits cease completely and are only resumed when they go back to and my husband went to it every day their overcrowded study hours.

A prominent doctor said recently, "If parents would think less of cramming up stairs his attention was attracted their children with useless knowledge, to the street. pettles and chairs match it. The red brick of the fireplace has been toned to harmonize with the walls, which have been painted instead of papered. In one corner there is a Turkish divan hung with dark blue goods, spangled. The pillows are of tapestry, leather and striped oriental silk in different shades of red, blue and yellow. Some of the leather pillows are ornamented with burnt work, others are coarsely embroidered with colored twine. Overhead there hangs a curious lamp of black twisted iron and ruby glass. Around the room are scattered deep red jardinieres holding palms. On the walls hang one or two good photographs and black and white prints framed to match the woodwork.

A Strange Experience. An Atlanta woman who is deeply interested in psychological research relates the following story about an exof the occult:

"We were having a new home built, to see what progress was being made. One day as he stood in the front room sion he understood that the corpse was that of his son, though he had no son at that time. Surprised and startled at the thought, he saw the procession vanish, and he was entirely at a loss how to account for the experience. The hour was noon, and there was nothing in his mood or environment apparently that induced the subconscious.

"Within a few months a little son Penmanship was born to us, and at the age of 3 years it was carried out of the gate in a flower covered, white casket and followed by the same friends my busband had seen that noontime long before. What explanation can be given of this circumstance and experiences like it that are constantly being mated in societies of psychical culture?"-Atlanta Constitution.

The Congregation Smiled. A certain clergyman when preaching extemporaneously touched on the subject of miracles. Some people, he said, had difficulty in accepting the miraculous stories of the Bible, as, for example, the story of the speech that Balaam's ass made to his master.

Looking solemnly at the congregation the preacher hammered in his contention with the remark, "Why should not God make an ass, to speak-he made me to speak."-New York Trib-

The New Woman

BY ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER

BROAD smile must certainly be illuminating the collective countenance of this country over the common law marriage act passed by the New York legislature at its recent session. At least if there is not a broad smile there ought to be. Men complained that the old common law marriage gave opportunities to unprincipled women for blackmail. Thereupon the lawmakers at Albany put on their wisest spectacles and proceeded to remedy things. The law which is the combined result of their grave deliberations is in brief as follows: Any man and woman who, Quaker fashion, in the presence of witnesses, shall deplare their intention to be husband and wife and shall thereafter live as such shall be so regarded by the law without further marriage rite if within six months of this ceremoniless union they file with the court a record, signed, sealed and witnessed, of their said intention to be man and wife. Now, look you, if before the expiration of the six months the record has not been filed then the marriage is null and void-is off, in short. The man may go free, so likewise may the woman, and both may take other partners as if they had never been married at all. If the man can get rid of the woman, so, on the other hand, can the woman also get rid of the man if she does not like him after six months' trial. In their wildest dreams social revolutionists and anarchists never perpetrated any more radical marital scheme than this which has just come out under the hands of the solons of New York, to this day one of the most difficult states of the Union in which to obtain divorce. When you wish to discover a perfectly awful bad railway station in several of our large cities are a ladies' parlor and tearoom fitted up beautifully, private dressing rooms in case a woman wishes to change her gown on arriving in town and a neat bootblack stand, where she may have her shoes cleaned and shined to the queen's taste. If you were to tell this to the people of European countries, they could not believe you.

In many American cities women have opened bootblacking rooms for their own sex and for children and are making a good living. CHILDREN'S NERVES.

They Have a Marked Effect Both on Their Looks and Dispositions. Nervousness is a childish ailment which masquerades under a variety of names, naughtiness being the one most in use. If the cases of any ten so called intractable children were to be investigated, long school hours, improper food or lack of outdoor exercise would be found the trouble with at least nine of them.

These things all affect the nerves, although the symptoms are different in different children. The high spirited ones indulge in mischievous pranks which drive their elders almost distracted. "I can't imagine what is the matter with Tommy," said a young schoolteacher. "He is tractable enough during the morning, but along toward the middle of the afternoon he begins to 'cut up' as if a demon of mischief possessed him." I remembered the case of another child. He also was considered unmanageable until the doctor suggested shorter school hours, less night study and a chance to indulge in out of door sports. After a month of the new order of affairs the change in his disposition surprised every one.

by little tricks of this sort. A schoolmate of mine was in the habit of rolling down her lower lip with her pencil while she studied. As a result it acquired an ugly droop which she could never get rid of. Another girl found it impossible to study unless shetwisted and pulled a short lock on her right temple. The result OVERSTUDY. was peculiar. The lock turned a decided gray after a couple of years, and when she went to a specialist to find the reason why he traced it directly to her nervous trick.

As for the cases where children's nails and lips are daily bitten to the quick, they are so common that they are scarcely worth mentioning. It is no- lates the following story about an exticeable, however, that the moment perience her husband had in the realms these girls begin their vacations their of the occult: nervous habits cease completely and are only resumed when they go back to their overcrowded study hours.

In one corner there is a Turkish divan hung with dark blue goods, spangled. The pillows are of tapestry, leather and striped oriental silk in different shades of red, blue and yellow. Some of the leather pillows are ornamented with burnt work, others are coarsely embroidered with colored twine. Overhead there hangs a curious lamp of black twisted iron and ruby glass. WELCOME THE BROTHERHOOD.

East Liverpool, the Crockery City, is soon to welcome the Brotherhood of Operative Potters, who are to meet here in annual convention. As representatives of an industry which has made this city great and contributed to its growth and prosperity as nothing else has done, the welcome should be cordial and sincere, and we have no doubt that it will be. A pig is better fitted for a scramble in a trough than a scholar."

This is severe and, we believe, unnecessarily so. We do not agree with Mr. Schwab, and we know of very few people who do. We do not consider money getting the measure of ability or the standard of success. But we are not willing to class all men of financial shrewdness with swine. Dollars are not to be despised, and there are few men, whatever their scholarship, who consider it beneath their dignity to work their earning capacity to the utmost. What we object to in the utterances of Mr. Schwab is the assertion that a college education is a handicap, when experience is constantly proving that it is an aid to a man, even in amassing wealth. A man who makes a success of manufacturing pig iron is not necessarily a pig. The iron master Carnegie is proving himself the most generous giver the world has known. And America is full of men of wealth who are genuine philanthropists and public benefactors. It is not right to decry them in college halls, for most of the colleges would not exist but for their THE FINEST GOODS MADE. WADE munificence. and his state should be proud of. His potato patch idea was simply great, and was born of genius. It originated in the hard times of 1894, but it is still found useful to the world in the year of unprecedented prosperity which marks the beginning of the twentieth century.

Columbus has Pingree potato patches this year. It calls them municipal patches, but the idea is Pingree's. They are proving a blessing to several hundred poor people in the capital city. They do more than provide food for the hungry. As a correspondent remarks, "It must be admitted that those who start out to cultivate potatoes are soon active in the cultivation of habits of thrift and industry." The No. 122 charity which does that is surely the right sort. When those who are helped show a willingness to help themselves, they are not likely long to remain content to live on alms. Pingree deserves the thanks of his countrymen for at least one practical idea.

WELCOME THE BROTHERHOOD.

East Liverpool, the Crockery City, is soon to welcome the Brotherhood of Operative Potters, who are to meet here in annual convention. As representatives of an industry which has made this city great and contributed to its growth and prosperity as nothing else has done, the welcome should be cordial and sincere, and we have no doubt that it will be. Now, if ever, is the time to show generous hospitality. With half a score of cities cansatisfaction and gratitude.

of Trinity cathedral at Cleveland, dedress to the graduating class of Lake Erie college at Painesville. In it he paid his respects to President Schwab, F. lodge. of the United States steel corporation, who recently spoke disparagingly of the value of a college education. He said to the class: "For a career of mere money getting I do not doubt more than the amassing of money. ter. A pig is better fitted for a scramble in a trough than a scholar."

This is severe and, we believe, unnecessarily so. We do not agree with Mr. Schwab, and we know of very few people who do. We do not consider money getting the measure of ability or the standard of success. But we are not willing to class all men of financial shrewdness with swine. Dollars are not to be despised, and there are few men, whatever their scholarship, who consider it beneath their dignity to work their earning capacity the utterances of Mr. Schwab is the assertion that a college education is a handicap, when experience is constantly proving that it is an aid to a man, even in amassing wealth.

A man who makes a success of manufacturing pig iron is not necessarily a pig. The iron master Carnegie is proving himself the most generous giver the world has known. And America is full of men of wealth who are genuine philanthropists and public benefactors. It is not right to decry munificence. American rich men are JEWELRY CO. neither misers nor pigs. CHAPTER IX-Continued.

In this dream I saw a girl with tawny gold hair and blue eyes raise a pistol and fire at the second man, who had drawn a cavalry saber. The man, shouting with pain, dropped his saber, clapped his other hand to his shoulder and galloped after his comrade, whose horse, frightened by the shots, was running away with him. Both disappeared in the wood, and the girl, who stood for a minute or two watching, the empty pistol in her hand, seemed to feel sure that they would not come back, for she rushed to the wounded man on the ground and raised his head in her arms.

I watched her with a curious interest, this blond girl who had been so bitter of speech and yet so much the master of herself. The man had risen to his knees once, but had fallen back from weakness. His eyes closed almost, fine face became very white, and there was blood on his hair. She raised his thead and kissed his face, once, twice and more, and begged him not to die. "Live! Live for yourself and for me, Philip, for I love you, my hero!" she said, and a great bay horse stood looking and listening. Then she flew to a sittle brook she saw flowing through the wood, and bringing water in her cap poured it upon the man's face, while the horse nodded approval. Then she washed the blood out of his hair and bound up the wound with something white. "No, Put, I will never leave thim," she said, "I will never leave him, for he has saved me from death open faced man of about 30. and worse, and I love him-I tell you I love him!" whereupon the great horse nodded his approval with extreme vigor. I came to myself, and I was sorry that the dream was over. It had been pleasant, very pleasant, and I was willing to dream on. I had a headache, but when I put my hand to the spot which ached I knew that the wound was not serious: that it was nothing but a trifle. A bullet, clipping under the skin, had glanced along my skull and passed on, inflicting that each trooper made. slight concussion, like a heavy blow had seen 20 men who had suffered similar wounds in battle and were as good prisoner." as ever the next day.

"You are not going to die, are you, Mr. Marcel?" tearfully asked the most modest and demure of blond English maidens, standing before me.

"My intentions are the precise opposite," I replied. "I have so much to live for. " It is curious how rapidly the feelings

develop under the stress of great hardships and danger. The day and a half | there who will take care of her.' that I had been with her were equal to a year and a half of ordinary time. Would you bring me a little of that secol water to drink in your cap?" I sked. "I see that the cap is wet almeady, and it won't hurt it.

It was as cold as ice and as refreshing as nectar as it ran down my throat. I thave seen men lying on the battlefield begging for water as if it were the one great gift of heaven to man.

I felt twice the man that I was a minute before. The girl was strangely quiet, even shy, and more than ever I felt as if it were my chief duty to protect her.

"No, Julia," I said; "this rebel against the king means to live. So far from dying, I haven't had anything more than a knockdown which has left you. Get up and ride."

But she declined with indignation. "I will not do that," she said. "You may be a rebel-in fact, I know you are-but you shall not walk while you are wounded. You must ride."

at last, though I did not like to do it, mine. and rode for a couple of hours. Then, feeling as strong as ever, I dismounted and made Julia take her turn on horseback. But at the end of an hour she, too, dismounted, and we walked on together, as before, not talking much, but happy. The sun was again retreating before the night, and the western skies were aflame. The light fell full upon the girl's face, and her beauty, splendid and glowing before, was tender and spiritual now.

"We shall be in Morgan's camp soon, Julia," I said, "and I will have to resign my prisoner."

"I shall consider myself your prisoner until I am retaken by the English," she

I did not reply, but I was willing to accept my responsibilities.

Old Put, who was walking slowly behind us after his custom, raised his predictions." Lead and neighed. It was not a whinny, but a loud, sonorous neigh that could be heard afar. It was full of meaning too. And a quarter of a mile ahead of us on one of the open ridges I saw the cause-a troop of a dozen horsemen riding toward us at a half gallop. Old Put neighed egain. long. loud and promptly.

"Ought we not to escape into the be English."

She did not seem to notice the strangeness of a suggestion from her that she hide from the English, but I was confident.

"They are not English," I said. "They are Americans. Old Put knows his friends. Trust him." In truth, the horse uttered in loud and joyous neigh a third time, and I had not the slightest apprehension, for it was impossible to deceive Old Put when he was wide awake.

The horsemen saw us and quickened their pace to a gallop. As they approached I could recognize the Contiuental buff and blue, and, telling Julia that it was all right, we walked gravely on to meet them. Old Put, his demonstrations of joy made, followed after with equal sobriety.

They were dashing riders, those men, and their curiosity must have been aroused by the sight of the girl, for they rame on at the long, swinging gallop of the good cavalryman and quickly inclosed us.

"Good evening, colonel," I said to the leader, saluting. "I am happy to see you again and to join your command."

It was Colonel William Washington. the distant cousin of our great commander in chief, one of the finest cavalry commanders of our time, a fine,

"Why, Marcel-Phil Marcel!" he cried in surprise. "Is it you?"

"Yes, it is I, colonel." "And the lady?"

"The lady is my prisoner, colonel, an English spy!"

"Did she give you that wound on your head?"

"I said a lady, colonel." Every hat came off, and there was

I thought so too. Perhaps I had done better than I thought.

and the prisoner, but I am on a scout to find Tarleton and ascertain when he is likely to attack us." "Do we mean to make a stand?" I

For the third time he laughed.

"Why, boy," he said, "you don't expect Morgan, who was with Arnold, the hero of Saratoga, to run away, do a sore spot on my head and a little you? He only wanted a little time to ache inside it, but I can travel as well drill his men and get his grip on them, as ever. Here, Old Put is waiting for and now he's ready to welcome Tarleton to the fray."

"Then you will have Tarleton by morning," I said, and I explained all that I had heard or learned otherwise in my flight with the prisoner, to which ing. This was one of our real heroes, a he listened with an interest that indi-As I was still a little dizzy I yielded cated its importance and made me feel

"Good! Good, Marcel!" he exclaimed more than once. "This is precisely what we wanted to know. And so Mr. Tarleton is hot on our heels and will attack in the morning? Well, Philip Marcel, I think you will see tomorrow as pretty a little battle as was ever fought on this continent, and neither Colonel Tarleton nor I nor any other can tell yet what the result will be." Julia was standing by me, and her old spirit suddenly flamed up. "I can," she said, "and I only hope that instead of falling in the battle you will be taken a prisoner, for tomorrow night your army will not exist."

"Miss Howard," said Colonel Washington, bowing-I had given her name we have more admiration for the ladies than confidence in their military

Those troopers may the odds against us, numbers, discipline and arms, while Tarleton himself had won his reputation as the ablest and most successful cavalry commander in the British service. We might again experience the disgrace and disaster of Camden, but Morgan was no Gates, and perhaps, on the other hand, we might equal the exploit of the wild borderers at King's Mountain, though it was a little too much to hope for that. But still we would fight, and to a young man it always seems better to fight than

> "Old comrade," I said to my horse, we fight the enemy tomorrow!"

He nodded joyously and then looked gravely at the bandage around my head. "It is nothing," I said. "I will take it off tonight. My head is well."

He nodded again, as if all his troubles were over.

The wife of Captain Dunn of the Fouth Carolina militia was in the camp, lady whom I knew, my distant kinswoman, and Julia was given into her charge.

"Take good care of her, Cousin Anna, " I said. "Remember that she is my prisoner." "Your prisoner, is she?" she replied enigmatically. "But remember, Philip, that the captor often becomes the cap-"Cousin Anna," I said indignantly. 'I hope you are not going to preach our defeat by Tarleton on the very eve of battle. It will have a discouraging effect. " "I said nothing about the battle. Go and attend to your work, Philip. I will take care of the girl." To Julia I said:

"We fight tomorrow, and I may not see you again."

Then I beat down and kissed her lips. She replied very simply and earnestly: "May you live through it, Philip!" Cousin Anna's back was turned, and she did not see or hear. I turned away and began to examine the camp and this field, destined to be the scene of a merzorable battle which was itself the opening of one of the greatest, most skillful and successful campaigns ever conducted on the soil of our continent. We were on a long slope, consisting of several hills rising above each other like the seats of an amphitheater, though at a much greater elevation, as the slope was so slight that it offered no impediment to the gallop of a horse. The men were gathering up old rails, which they were using for the campfires, and I noticed many old tracks of the feet of animals. To my question one of the men said: "We are going to fight where the cows pastured. Don't you know that this army is camped on the cow pens of a very worthy man named Hannah? And these rails are the last that are left of his pens." Behind us flowed the wide, deep and unfordable Broad river, retreat thus being cut off in case of defeat. I asked the meaning of this strange military maneuver which meant either victory or destruction, and again the explanation was ready:

"More than half of our men are militia, and you can never tell whether militia will run like rabbits or fight like devils. All early signs fail, and General Morgan says it's cheaper to have the river behind us and make 'em fight than to station regulars in the rear to shoot down the cowards."

Presently I saw General Morgan himself passing among the men and preparing for the expected attack in the mornfighter and leader and no politician, a man whom the great Washington esteemed and loved to reward. I had seen him at Saratoga and elsewhere, and his figure as well as his name always drew attention. Over six feet high and built in proportion, with a weight of 200 pounds, and a large, fine, open face, he was a type of the true American, the best of all men in mind and body.

There was plenty of provender in the camp, and I gave Old Put the first solid meal that had come to him in several days. I wanted him to be in good trim for the morrow, for he and I were to take our proper place with Washington's cavalry, to which we belonged, only a handful of men, but able and true and capable of doing great things in the nick of time. There had been some question about the bandage on my head, which I wore as a precaution against taking cold in the scalp wound, but I showed that it was only a trifle, and Colonel Washington rightfully remarked that such a slight wound would only increase a man's efficiency on the battlefield. Then he presented me with a fine saber, which I needed badly, and told me to lie down on the ground and go to sleep, but I could not sleep just nial armies I roamed about the encampment. The campfires flared up in the cold January darkness. The men sat around them, talking and playing cards with old greasy cards or singing the songs of the hills and the woods. Some of the soldiers were asleep on their blankets or the bare ground, for we were always a ragged and unhoused army at the best, and only a few of the officers had

A sharp breeze came from across the river, and the flames bent to it, their light flickering over wild, brown faces that knew only the open air, wind, rain, hail or whatever came. Most of them still carried their curved and carved powderhorns and their bullet pouches, inseparable companions, over their shoulders, and their long, slender barreled rifles, so unlike the British muskets, lay at their sides.

Smoke rose from the fires and blew in the faces of the men, deepening the brown and giving them another shade of the Indian. A curse mingled now and then with the singing and the talk of the card players, and from the borders of the camp came the stamp of the horses and an occasional neigh. In the darkness, half lighted by the reeling fires, the camp became a camp of wild men, whose faces the wavering light molded into whatever grotesque images

We were but a little army, only 900 strong, but many of us had come great distances and from places wide apart. An arc of 1,000 miles would scarce cover all our homes. There were the militia, South Carolinians and Georgians, raw troops, whom one can never trust; then anapolis Journal. the little remnant of the brigade that De Kalb had led on the fatal day of Camden, splendid soldiers whose line the whole British army could not break, the survivors now eager to avenge the disgrace their brethren suffered on that day; then the stanch Virginia troops, that we knew would never fail, and near them our two or three score of cavalrymen under Washington-a little army, I say again, but led by such leaders as Morgan, Washington, Howard and Pickens! Down the slopes the sentinels were on watch, but there was no fear of a surprise, for the scouts were just bringing in word that Tarleton could not come before daylight, and then, owing to the slope and the open ground, his approach would be seen for a great

A tall, thin man, with a wild face, whom I took to be one of the preachers at the great revival meetings so common on the border, rose in the midst of the carr p and began to speak. Some listened, and some went on with the talking and card playing. I could hear the rustle of the pasteboard as the cards were shuffled. I sought my own place in our troop and lay down upon one half of my blanket, with the other half above me. Old Put gnawed at some fodder beside

But sleep would not come just yet. and I opened my eyes again to see that the fires were sinking and the darkness was coming down nearer to the earth. Half the men were asleep already; the others were quiet, seeking sleep, and the steady breathing of near 1,000 men in a close space made a strange, whistling noise like that of the wind. A flaring blaze would throw a streak of light across a sleeping soldier, showing only a head or a leg or an arm, as if the man had been disjointed. I would hear the faint rattle of a sentry's firelock and the heavy hoof of a horse as he crowded his comrades for room. An officer in dingy uniform would stalk across the field to see that all was right, and over us all the wind moaned and the darkness gathered close up to the edge of the dying fires. Weakness overpowered my excited brain and nerves, and I slept.

Old Put away with him. Both disappeared in the wood, and the girl, who stood for a minute or two watching, the empty pistol in her hand, seemed to feel sure that they would not come back, for she rushed to the wounded man on the ground and raised his head in her arms.

I watched her with a curious interest, this blond girl who had been so bitter of speech and yet so much the master of herself. The man had risen to his knees once, but had fallen back from weakness. His eyes closed almost, shis face became very white, and there was blood on his hair. She raised his thead and kissed his face, once, twice Philip, for I love you, my hero!" she said, and a great bay horse stood looking and listening. Then she flew to a sittle brook she saw flowing through the wood, and bringing water in her cap poured it upon the man's face, while see you again and to join your comthe horse nodded approval. Then she mand." washed the blood out of his hair and bound up the wound with something white. "No, Put, I will never leave thim," she said, "I will never leave him, for he has saved me from death and worse, and I love him-I tell you I love him!" whereupon the great horse nodded his approval with extreme vigor.

I came to myself, and I was sorry that the dream was over. It had been pleasant, very pleasant, and I was willing to dream on. I had a headache, but when I put my hand to the spot which ached your head?" I knew that the wound was not serious; that it was nothing but a trifle. A bullet, clipping under the skin, had glanced along my skull and passed on, inflicting that each trooper made. a slight concussion, like a heavy blow from a man's fist, but that was all. I had seen 20 men who had suffered similar wounds in battle and were as good as ever the next day.

"You are not going to die, are you. Mr. Marcel?" tearfully asked the most modest and demure of blond English maidens, standing before me.

"My intentions are the precise oppo-site," I replied. "I have so much to live for. "

It is curious how rapidly the feelings develop under the stress of great hardships and danger. The day and a half that I had been with her were equal to a year and a half of ordinary time.

"Would you bring me a little of that scool water to drink in your cap?" I asked. "I see that the cap is wet almeady, and it won't hurt it." She brought the water, and I drank.

It was as cold as ice and as refreshing as nectar as it ran down my throat. I thave seen men lying on the battlefield begging for water as if it were the one great gift of heaven to man. I felt twice the man that I was a

"No, Julia," I said; "this rebel against the king means to live. So far from dying, I haven't had anything you. Get up and ride."

But she declined with indignation. "I will not do that," she said. "You may be a rebel-in fact, I know you are wounded. You must ride." at last, though I did not like to do it, mine and rode for a couple of hours. Then, feeling as strong as ever, I dismounted and made Julia take her turn on horseback. But at the end of an hour she, too, dismounted, and we walked on together, as before, not talking much, but happy. The sun was again retreating before the night, and the western skies were aflame. The light fell full upon the girl's face, and her beauty, splendid and glowing before, was tender and spiritual now.

"We shall be in Morgan's camp soon, Julia," I said, "and I will have to resign my prisoner."

"I shall consider myself your prisoner until I am retaken by the English," she

In truth, the horse uttered his loud and joyous neigh a third time and I had not the slightest apprehension, for it was impossible to deceive Old Put when he was wide awake.

The horsemen saw us and quickened their pace to a gallop. As they approached I could recognize the Contiuental buff and blue, and, telling Julia that it was all right, we walked gravely on to meet them. Old Put, his demonstrations of joy made, followed after with equal sobriety.

They were dashing riders, those men, "Live! Live for yourself and for me, aroused by the sight of the girl, for they rame on at the long, swinging gallop of the good cavalryman and quickly in-

It was Colonel William Washington, the distant cousin of our great commander in chief, one of the finest cavalry commanders of our time, a fine, open faced man of about 30.

"Yes, it is I, colonel." "And the lady?"

"The lady is my prisoner, colonel, an English spy!"

I thought so too. Perhaps I had done better than I thought.

"Now that I have brought the prisoner in," I said, "I will have to resign her into your hands, colonel."

"It will be but for a brief space, for the camp of Morgan is only three miles back. There are some American women there who will take care of her."

"But I wish to remind you of one thing, colonel." "What is that?" "A lady cannot be shot or hanged as He only wanted a little time to ache inside it, but I can travel as well drill his men and get his grip on them, as ever. Here, Old Put is waiting for and now he's ready to welcome Tarleton to the fray."

"Then you will have Tarleton by morning," I said, and I explained all that I had heard or learned otherwise are-but you shall not walk while you in my flight with the prisoner, to which he listened with an interest that indi-As I was still a little dizzy I yielded cated its importance and made me feel

CHAPTER X.

IN MORGAN'S CAMP.

Then we proceeded to the encampment, and Colonel Washington himself went with us, his plans being changed by my news, My head was buzzing

Ought we not to escape into the with excitement. We were going to fight Tarleton at last, though with all the odds against us, numbers, discipline and arms, while Tarleton himself had won his reputation as the ablest and most successful cavalry commander in the British service. We might again experience the disgrace and disaster of Camden, but Morgan was no Gates, and perhaps, on the other hand, we might equal the exploit of the wild borderers at King's Mountain, though it was a little too much to hope for that. But still we would fight, and to a young man it always seems better to fight than to run. "Old comrade," I said to my horse, "we fight the enemy tomorrow!"

He nodded joyously and then looked gravely at the bandage around my head. "It is nothing," I said. "I will take it off tonight. My head is well."

He nodded again, as if all his troubles were over. The wife of Captain Dunn of the Fouth Carolina militia was in the camp, a lady whom I knew, my distant kinswoman, and Julia was given into her charge.

"Take good care of her, Cousin Anna, " I said. "Remember that she is my "Your prisoner, is she?" she replied enigmatically. "But remember, Philip, that the captor often becomes the cap-"Cousin Anna," I said indignantly, "I hope you are not going to preach our defeat by Tarleton on the very eve of battle. It will have a discouraging ef-"I said nothing about the battle. Go and attend to your work, Philip. I will take care of the girl." To Julia I said:

"We fight tomorrow, and I may not see you again."

Then I bent down and kissed her lips. She replied very simply and earnestly: "May you live through it, Philip!" Cousin Anna's back was turned, and she did not see or hear. I turned away and began to examine the scene of a merzorable battle which was itself the opening of one of the greatest, most skillful and successful campaigns ever conducted on the soil of our continent. We were on a long slope, consisting of several hills rising above each other like the seats of an amphitheater, though at a much greater elevation, as the slope was so slight that it offered no impediment to the gallop of a horse. The men were gathering up old rails, which they were using for the campfires, and I noticed many old tracks of the feet of animals. To my question one of the men said: "We are going to fight where the cows pastured. Don't you know that this army is camped on the cow pens of a very worthy man named Hannah? And these rails are the last that are left of his pens."

Behind us flowed the wide, deep and unfordable Broad river, retreat thus being cut off in case of defeat. I asked the meaning of this strange military maneuver which meant either victory or destruction, and again the explanation was ready:

"More than half of our men are militia, and you can never tell whether militia will run like rabbits or fight like devils. All early signs fail, and General Morgan says it's cheaper to have the river behind us and make 'em fight than to station regulars in the rear to shoot down the cowards."

Presently I saw General Morgan himself passing among the men and preparing for the expected attack in the morning. This was one of our real heroes, a fighter and leader and no politician, a man whom the great Washington esteemed and loved to reward. I had seen him at Saratoga and elsewhere, and his figure as well as his name always drew attention. Over six feet high and built in proportion, with a weight of 200 pounds, and a large, fine, open face, he was a type of the true American, the best of all men in mind and body.

There was plenty of provender in the camp, and I gave Old Put the first solid meal that had come to him in several days. I wanted him to be in good trim for the morrow, for he and I were to take our proper place with Washington's cavalry, to which we belonged, only a handful of men, but able and true and capable of doing great things in the nick of time. There had been some question about the bandage on my head, which I wore as a precaution against taking cold in the scalp wound, but I showed that it was only a trifle, and Colonel Washington rightfully remarked that such a slight wound would only increase a man's efficiency on the battlefield. Then he presented me with a fine saber, which I needed badly, and told me to lie down on the ground and go to sleep, but I could not sleep just then, and with the freedom of our colonial armies I roamed about the encamp-

The campfires flared up in the cold January darkness. The men sat around them, talking and playing cards with old greasy cards or singing the songs of the hills and the woods. A sharp breeze came from across the river, and the flames bent to it, their light flickering over wild, brown faces that knew only the open air, wind, rain, hail or whatever came. Most of them still carried their curved and carved powderhorns and their bullet pouches, inseparable companions, over their shoulders, and their long, slender barreled rifles, so unlike the British muskets, lay at their sides.

Pickens! Down the slopes the sentinels were on watch, but there was no fear of a surprise, for the scouts were just bringing in word that Tarleton could not come before daylight, and then, owing to the slope and the open ground, his approach would be seen for a great distance.

The new men talked the most, some about the coming battle, eagerly, volubly, others about things the farthest from it, but in the same eager, voluble, unreal tone. The veterans were silent mostly, and already with the calm and hardihood of long usage were seeking Advertising company, Toledo, O. the rest and sleep which they knew they would need. A tall, thin man, with a wild face, whom I took to be one of the preachers at the great revival meetings so common on the border, cose in the midst of the carr p and began to speak. Some listened, and some went on with the talking and card playing. I could hear the rustle of the pasteboard as the cards were shuffled. He was a fighting preacher, for he exhorted them to strike with all their strength in the coming battle and if they must die to die like Christian heroes. He prayed to God for the success of our arms, then stepped down from the stump on which he had stood and disthe front line of the South Carolina Advertising company, Toledo, O. militia the next day.

But sleep would not come just vet. and I opened my eyes again to see that the fires were sinking and the darkness was coming down nearer to the earth. Half the men were asleep already; the others were quiet, seeking sleep, and the steady breathing of near 1,000 men in a close space made a strange, whistling noise like that of the wind. A flaring blaze would throw a streak of light across a sleeping soldier, showing only a head or a leg or an arm, as if the man had been disjointed. I would hear the faint rattle of a sentry's firelock and the heavy hoof of a horse as he crowded his comrades for room. An officer in dingy uniform would stalk across the field to see that all was right, and over us all the wind moaned and the darkness gathered close up to the edge of the dying fires. Weakness overpowered my excited brain and nerves, and I slept.

Said He Was Tired of Preaching Funeral Sermons and Lauding People to the Skies, and That Hz Would Assail Divorces.

Kokoma, Ind., June 18 .- "When my father and my mother forsake me, then my Lord will take me up." spoke the Rev. E. G. Walk, at the spoke the Rev. 2. Walk, at the funeral of 4-year-old William Hancock, and the divorced parents, sitting apart, trembled and started at his words. The preacher exclaimed:

"I am heartily tired of preaching funeral sermons and lauding people to the skies. I will assail divorces, and I deplore the fact that so few people properly recognize the sacredness and solemnity of the marriage

Allen Jackson, a brother of Mrs. Hancock was told at the Cemetery of the preacher's remarks, strode over to the grave, placed his hand on Walk's shoulder, and demanded an apology. The preacher refused, saying: have nothing to apologize for, and I will preach the same sermon again seems appropriate." Jackson was taken away.

BARKER PLACED ON TRIAL.

Charged With Assault on Rev. John Keller With Intent to Kill. New York, June 18.-Thomas G.

Barker was placed on trial in Jersey City before Judge Blair, charged with an assault with intent to kill. On Feb. 3 Barker shot the Rev. John Keller, of Arlington, N. J., vicar of Trinity enapel, in that place. Barker told the aumorities he shot the minister because his wife had told him that Keller had been guilty of criminally assaulting her. When Keller was shot ne was on his way to Fort Lee to assist in the ordination of a minister. Barker stepped out from the shadow of a heage and fired at him with a revolver. Barker says that he spoke to Keller before firing. Keller says that he did not see his assailant. One of the bullets fired by Barker went through Keller's facial bone from the right side, destroyed the sight of the right eye, and after tearing through the masal bone buried itself beneath the skin of the left side of the face. A second bullet shattered the fingers of the right hand.

Mr. Keiler denounced the story as false, and declared that his whole life was a refutation of the charge.

More than 100 women were in the Dr. Keller's church in Arlington, others were friends of the prisoner and his wife. Among the men were a dozen or more in clerical garb. These were friends and colleagues of Mr. Keller, and included Bishop Starkey, of the Episcopal diocese. Judge John A. Blair occupied the

FIGHTING THE MAD MULLAH

Fanatic Cut Off From His Base. Lost 50 Men In One Engagement.

London, June 18 .- A dispatch to the foreign office from the consul general at Somaniland said that the Mad Mullah expedition had heavy fighting May 28.

The flying column of mounted infantry under Captain Merewether struck the Mullah's supply camp during a night march and captured 5,000 head of cattle, killed one important chief and captured another, covered 100 miles, fought a sharp action and returned to its base all in 24 hours.

The main force of the British under Colonel Swayne departed for Eldab June 2, leaving MacNeill with 300 men to guard Zariba. Swayne's column advanced against the Mullah's Inthe meantime the Mullah, with 3,000 followers, attacked Serabia three times. He was finaly driven off by Captain MacNeill with a loss of 500 men. The British in Zariba had 10 men killed and 9 wounded.

ED BIDDLE ON TRIAL.

Jury Secured to Try Him For Complicity In the Kahney Murder.

Pittsburg, June 18.-The trial of Edward Biddle, the third man who is believed to have participated in the murder of Thomas D. Kahney, the grocer, of Mt. Washington, opened in criminal court. Of the original Dorman-Biddle gang, Walter Dorman has pleaded guilty to the charge of murder, and the second, John Biddle, was as the shape is concerned, but with convicted last week of murder of the first degree.

Of the three members of the gang Edward Piddle is perhaps the most notorious because of his desperate fight with the officers in their efforts to arrest him. It was during the battle that brave Patrick E. Fitzgerald, ourt room. Many were members of the city detective, met his death.

During his brother's trial the attorthe circumsuntial evidence and the confession of Dorman overthrew the story of the brothers, and John was found guilty.

Attorney James Francis Burke, who was appointed to conduct the defense of the members of the gang. asked to be relieved after the trial of John Biddle, and his request was granted. John D. Watson is Edward Biddle's attorney. District Attorney John C. Haymaker conducted the case for the commonwealth.

Judges John D. Shafer and Elliott Rodgers were on the bench. A jury was secured.

Porto Ricon Legislature Will Assemble Next Winter.

Washington, June 18.—Secretary Hay Monday received the following telegram from Governor Allen, of Porto Rico, at San Juan:

"Unanimous vote today, heads of departments, fixed the date for the special sessions of the legislature for July 4. The date of the proclamation will be announced at the session."

The proclamation referred to is that which will declare free trade to exist between the United States and Porto Rico, after a designated date, in conformity with the terms of the Foraker act, which allowed two years to test the ability of the island to sustain itself through internal taxation. Governor Allen's reports have indicated that under the Holander act Porto Rico is now ready to assume free trade.

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

material made. Some take a handful of flowers and a little of nothing and make it all into a dream of beauty, and others could take ever so much more valuable things and the result would be a nightmare. The art of good dressing seems thus to be born in one rather than acquired. So the only thing one can do in this case is to find a conscientious dressmaker and trust to her judgment. These sage reflections are the result of seeing too many women in one day.

I sat beside one lady in a public place, and she had a hat that I immediately made a note of. It was a large round hat, made of alternate rows of black neapolitan and fine yellow straw braid as narrow as the finest soutache. The crown was high and the brim wide. In the back the brim was bent down and fastened to the hair by several fine fancy pins. The whole front of the hat was covered with an immense bunch of small white daisies interspersed with grasses and many loops of narrow black ribbon wired to stand up in irregularly shaped true lovers' knots. In the back of the hat the flowers dwindled down to sprays and the ribbon to loose ends.

It is not very easy for a middle aged woman to find a hat which will not accentuate the fact that she is verging on the forbidden ground. But the black straw and lace effects in the bolero or English walking hats are very good if proper care be taken in the trimming

So much black and white is worn that many a woman adopts this color scheme for not only hats, but for everything else this summer. I have seen some black hats-and very becoming ones they were, too-and there was not one note of color about them, nor did they in the least suggest mourning.

In spite of the attempt to force upon the American women the styles of 1862 and thereabout, the nearest approach has been the hat of the period so far quite different trimming, and the flowing sleeves with their accompanying undersleeves-yes, and a few flounces. But, then, we always had more or less flounces. The plaited skirts where the loosened plait is let to form a fullness one set on with gathers and generally trimmed. The Dewey flounce has tak-

Said He Was Tired of Preaching Funeral Sermons and Lauding Peo-Would Assail Divorces.

Kokoma, Ind., June 18 .- "When my father and my mother forsake me, then my Lord will take me up." spoke the Rev. E. G. Walk, at the funeral of 4-year-old William Hancock, and the divorced parents, sitting apart, trembled and started at his words. The preacher exclaimed:

"I am heartily tired of preaching funeral sermons and lauding people to the skies. I will assail divorces, and I deplore the fact that so few people properly recognize the sacredness and solemnity of the marriage

Allen Jackson, a brother of Mrs. Hancock was told at the Cemetery of the preacher's remarks, strode over to the grave, placed his hand on Walk's houlder, and demanded an apology. The preacher refused, saying: have nothing to apologize for, and i rill preach the same sermon again seems appropriate." Jackson ras taken away.

"Six years ago my stomach and heart troubled me so much I had to do something, as the doctors could not help me," writes Mrs. S. A. Knapp, of San Jose, California, Box 392. "I went to San Francisco and had treatment for catarrh of the stomach, and was better for some time, then it came back. I then used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.' These medicines cured my stomach. I do not have the pain and indigestion as I did. It is very hard for me to tell you what I suffered before I commenced taking your valuable medicine. I recommend it to all the sufferers whom I meet."

The Rev. John Haynes was famous for his pithy sayings. At one time, says one of our exchanges, he overheard his daughter and some young friends criticising certain neighbors more severely than was pleasing to him, whereupon he proceeded to read them a lecture on the sinfulness of scandal.

"But, father," remonstrated his daughter, "we must say something" "If you can do nothing better," retorted Mr. Haynes dryly, "get a pumpkin and roll it about. That will be at least an innocent diversion.'

Not long afterward a conference of ministers met at his house. During the evening an earnest discussion on certain points of doctrine arose, and, from the lofty pitch of some of the voices, it seemed as if part of the disputants at least were in danger of losing their temper.

CHASED BY PICNICKERS

Baker With Cakes, Pursued By a Hungry Crowd, Drops His Burden.

A laughable incident occurred on Second street about 7 o'clock. The picnickers from Sebring had gathered at the depot to await the arrival of their train and a German baker passed the depot carrying four large cakes in his hands, which he was taking to a restaurant nearby.

A number of the people made a rush for him and he started to run, but he had not gone very far before he dropped two of the cakes. That was what the small boys wanted to see and they made a rush for the cakes, which they made disappear in a very short time.

Chaffinville Boys Defeated the Crockery City Juniors With Ease.

The Chaffinville Revenue Dodgers and the Crockery City Juniors met in a fierce contest on the diamond at Columbian park yesterday afternoon. The Crockery City lads were confident of victory and put up a stiff game from the start, but failed to make any impression on the invincible mountaineers whose onslaughts were irresistable.

The Juniors went down to defeat to the tune of 13 to 7, and the moonshiners joyously wended their way homeward more confident than ever that mountain climbing under pressure was the best training for speedy work on the diamond.

FELL DOWN STAIRS

Twelve-Year-Old Child in the East End Sustains Painful Injuries.

Clara Kommell, the 12-year-old daughter of George Kommell, of St. George street, sustained painful injuries as the result of a fall down the stairs last evening. At first it was thought that her arm was broken and a doctor was summoned, but upon examination it was found that the member was very severely sprained, but not broken.

The child had also received many bad bruises. The physician attended to her wounds and she is getting along nicely today.

AN ORIENTAL MIX UP

THE STORY OF AN APPOINTMENT TO A JUDGESHIP.

How the Man Slated For Associate Justice of New Mexico's Supreme Court First Got a Surprise and Afterward the Office.

Late in the year 1900 it was decided by the powers in Washington that Mr. Daniel H. McMillan, ex-state senator of New York and for many years general counsel in the city of Buffalo for the Vanderbilt system of railroads, was to be appointed associate justice of the supreme court of New Mexico.

This appointment had been urged not only by those who knew Mr. McMillan in the state of New York, but by lawyers of Santa Fe and of other cities in New Mexico who knew of him and desired to see him obtain the place.

Toward the close of 1900, with Governor Otero of the territory, Mr. Mc-Millan was on a Lake Shore train speeding toward Washington. When the train stopped at Painesville, O., newsboys boarded it, and one of them called out: "All about the new supreme court judge of New Mexico. Silas Alexander appointed." The governor of the territory and Mr. McMillan looked at each other, and they bought a paper, and in that paper they read in East Liverpool. glaring headlines that Silas Alexander of Santa Fe had received the appointment to the vacant judgeship.

Mr. McMillan the morning of his arrival in the capital went at once to the office of the secretary of war.

"How did it happen I was not appointed?" he asked. "Why," said Mr. Root, "you are appointed!" "Why," said Mr. McMillan, "you are pocket the Cleveland newspaper of the day before. Secretary Root turned all colors. "This is a mistake," he said; "an absurd, strange mistake, for I bave it from the president's own lips, corroborated by Mr. Griggs, attorney genthe recommendation was duly signed by President McKinley."

Then the men went to the state, war and navy building and found Attorney General Griggs.

"But you have been given the appointment," said Mr. Griggs. "Then what does this newspaper re port mean?" was the reply. The attorney general was dumfound

ed. "I cannot conceive what it means," he said. He tapped his beil, and when a messenger came in response he requested the attendance of the clerk in confidential relations with him, whose duty it is to fill in upon appointment signed for appointments by the execu- guests.

The clerk appeared. "Mr. Blank," said the attorney general, "find out at once whose name was sent yesterday to the senate with the recommendation by the president that he be appointed of New Mexico."

"Mr. Alexander," he said-"the man from Buffalo."

Then a glimmering of the truth dawned upon the group. "Are you sure," said Attorney General Griggs, "that the name was not McMillan?" "Certainly," was the reply. "The name was Silas Alexander."

The situation was remarkable, and time was important.

The president of the United States had inadvertently, by the error of a subordinate, been made to set aside the man whom he had intended to name.

There came a pause. Mr. Grigge broke the silence.

"Well, gentlemen," he said, "the fat is in the fire, but we must get it out. My subordinate has made this mistake, and I must do my best to get it rectified, and perhaps the fault is partly mine, for I told him to fill in the name of 'the Buffalo man,' and he, probably. seeing the name Alexander and identifying it with the congressman of the same name prominently known in Washington as coming from Buffalo, thought that he was to be the ap-

And so the three men went to the president and explained matters, and as a consequence a messenger, precedwill remain here on a visit of a week ed by a telephone message, sped rapidly toward the capitol with instructions to seek immediately the leader of the senate and prevent any action on the mistaken nomination and to make the statement to that leader that it was withdrawn.

> The messenger arrived just as the senate was about to take action, and if the telephone had been relied upon the nomination of Silas Alexander would have been confirmed by the United States senate, and the will of the president of the republic would have been for disorderly conduct. defeated .- Saturday Evening Post.

The New Woman

> BY ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER

broad smile there ought to be. Men complained that the old common law marriage gave opportunities to unprincipled women for blackmail. Thereupon the lawmakers at Albany put on their wisest spectacles and proceeded to remedy things. The law which is the combined result of their grave deliberations is in brief as follows: Any man and woman who, Quaker fashion, in the presence of witnesses, shall deplare their intention to be husband and wife and shall thereafter live as such shall be so regarded by the law without further marriage rite if within six and preached at Steubenville, Cadiz, file with the court a record, signed, sealed and witnessed, of their said intention to be man and wife. Now, look you, if before the expiration of the six months the record has not been filed then the marriage is null and void-is off, in short. The man may go free, so likewise may the woman, and both The 100th anniversary of the settling may take other partners as if they had never been married at all. If the man can get rid of the woman, so, on the other hand, can the woman also get rid of the man if she does not like him after six months' trial. In their wildest dreams social revolutionists and anarchists never perpetrated any more radical marital scheme than this which has just come out under the hands of the solons of New York, to this day one of the most difficult states of the Union in which to obtain divorce. When you wish to discover a perfectly awful bad break, watch men-men always.

Among other things to which the twentieth century will point with pride will be the improved physical status of civilized women. The consumptive, protected female heroine is already rapidly giving place to the heroine who can protect herself. "I can't imagine what is the matter with Tommy," said a young schoolteacher. "He is tractable enough during the morning, but along toward the middle of the afternoon he begins to 'cut up' as if a demon of mischief possessed him." I remembered the case of another child. He also was considered unmanageable until the doctor suggested shorter school hours, less night study and a chance to indulge in out of door sports. After a month of the new order of affairs the change in his disposition surprised every one.

In girls nervousness shows itself differently. They bite their nails and their lips, and more than one girl student has spoiled her good looks for life by little tricks of this sort. A schoolmate of mine was in the habit of rolling down her lower lip with her pencil while she studied. As a result it acquired an ugly droop which she could never get rid of. Another girl found it impossible to study unless she twisted and pulled a short lock on her right temple. The result was peculiar. The lock turned a decided gray after a couple of years, and when she went to a specialist to find the reason why he traced it directly to her nervous trick.

As for the cases where children's nails and lips are daily bitten to the quick, they are so common that they are terested in psychological research rescarcely worth mentioning. visitor enters immediately into a square room fitted with a large fireplace. This reception room is not treated like an ante chamber, but it is furnished in a cozy fashion, with easy chairs, palms, rugs and hangings.

Red is a favorite color for such rooms, and in the one illustrated it has been used in conjunction with Turkish blue. The woodwork, originally oak, has been stained a dark shade, and the settles and chairs match it. The red brick of the fireplace has been toned to harmonize with the walls, which have been painted instead of papered. In one corner there is a Turkish divan hung with dark blue goods, spangled. The pillows are of tapestry, leather and striped oriental silk in different shades of red, blue and yellow. Some of the leather pillows are ornamented with burnt work, others are coarsely embroidered with colored twine. Overhead there hangs a curious lamp of black twisted iron and ruby glass. Around the room are scattered deep red jardinieres holding palms. On the walls hang one or two good photographs and black and white prints framed to match the woodwork.

Looking out of the winwhich they forget in a few years, and dow, he saw a funeral procession passing from the door and out through the gate. The casket was small, white and covered with flowers. He recognized friends and neighbors in the crowd, and through some indefinable impression he understood that the corpse was that of his son, though he had no son at that time. Surprised and startled at the thought, he saw the procession vanish, and he was entirely at a loss how to account for the experience. The hour was noon, and there was nothing in his mood or environment apparently that induced the subconscious.

"Within a few months a little son was born to us, and at the age of 3 years it was carried out of the gate in a flower covered, white casket and followed by the same friends my busband had seen that noontime long before. WELCOME THE BROTHERHOOD.

East Liverpool, the Crockery City, is soon to welcome the Brotherhood of Operative Potters, who are to meet here in annual convention. As representatives of an industry which has made this city great and contributed to its growth and prosperity as nothing else has done, the welcome should be cordial and sincere, and we have no doubt that it will be. Now, if ever, is the time to show generous hospisatisfaction and gratitude.

Brotherhood will call upon the busi- o'clock. ness men for assistance in substantial form. The responses should be prompt and generous.

This is severe and, we believe, unnecessarily so. We do not agree with Mr. Schwab, and we know of very few people who do. We do not consider money getting the measure of ability or the standard of success. But we are not willing to class all men of financial shrewdness with swine. Dollars are not to be despised, and there are few men, whatever their scholarship, who consider it beneath their dignity to work their earning capacity to the utmost. What we object to in the utterances of Mr. Schwab is the assertion that a college education is a handicap, when experience is constantly proving that it is an aid to a man, even in amassing wealth.

A man who makes a success of manufacturing pig iron is not necessarily a pig. The iron master Carnegie is proving himself the most generous giver the world has known. And America is full of men of wealth who are genuine philanthropists and public benefactors. It is not right to decry them in college halls, for most of the colleges would not exist but for their THE FINEST GOODS MADE. WADE munificence. The News Review and his state should be proud of. His potato patch idea was simply great, and was born of genius. It originated in the hard times of 1894, but it is still found useful to the world in the year of unprecedented prosperity which marks the beginning of the twentieth century.

Columbus has Pingree potato patches this year. It calls them municipal patches, but the idea is Pingree's. They are proving a blessing to several hundred poor people in the capital city. They do more than provide food for the hungry. As a correspondent remarks, "It must be admitted that those who start out to cultivate potatoes are soon active in the cultivation of habits of thrift and industry." The charity which does that is surely the right sort. When those who are helped show a willingness to help themselves, they are not likely long to remain content to live on alms. Pingree deserves the thanks of his countrymen for at least one practical idea.

Gen. Charles Grosvenor has written a two column letter to say that he did not advocate the third term idea. Gen. Grosvenor's head is level, and he usually talks sense. His friends will be glad to learn that he is living up to his long-established reputation.

The change, so far as it concerns the Venezuela minister, is said at the ing the score 6 to 5 in favor of the state department to have no particulocals. Following is the score by in- lar political significance. Mr. Loomis goes elsewhere than Caracas at his own request and desire. It is true that the Venezuela government has expressed dissatisfaction with Mr. Loomis in more ways than one, but the fact that the minister is not removed from the diplomatic service, but is given another post of equal dignity and honor, is a mark of the esteem of the state department. Also, it may be noted, Mr. Bowen, the new minister to Caracas, goes to his post with instructions on the same lines as those supplied to Mr. Loomis, which formed the basis for his action, so that Mr. Bowen, who is a man of great vigor, is likely to follow Mr. Loomis' footsteps in the matter of

In this dream I saw a girl with tawny gold hair and blue eyes raise a pistol (be English." and fire at the second man, who had drawn a cavalry saber. The man, shouting with pain, dropped his saber, clapped his other hand to his shoulder and galloped after his comrade, whose horse, away with him. Both disappeared in the wood, and the girl, who stood for a minute or two watching, the empty pistol in her hand, seemed to feel sure that they would not come back, for she rushed to the wounded man on the ground and raised his head in her arms.

I watched her with a curious interest, this blond girl who had been so bitter of speech and yet so much the master of herself. The man had risen to his knees once, but had fallen back from weakness. His eyes closed almost, was blood on his hair. She raised his thead and kissed his face, once, twice "Live! Live for yourself and for me, Philip, for I love you, my hero!" she said, and a great bay horse stood looking and listening. Then she flew to a Little brook she saw flowing through the wood, and bringing water in her cap poured it upon the man's face, while the horse nodded approval. Then she mand." washed the blood out of his hair and bound up the wound with something "No, Put, I will never leave him," she said, "I will never leave him, for he has saved me from death open faced man of about 30. and worse, and I love him-I tell you I love him!" whereupon the great horse nodded his approval with extreme vigor. "You are not going to die, are you, Mr. Marcel?" tearfully asked the most modest and demure of blond English maidens, standing before me.

"My intentions are the precise opposite," I replied. "I have so much to

As I was still a little dizzy I yielded at last, though I did not like to do it, mine. and rode for a couple of hours. Then, feeling as strong as ever, I dismounted and made Julia take her turn on horseback. But at the end of an hour she, too, as before, not talking much, but happy. The sun was again retreating before the night, and the western skies were aflame. The light fell full upon the girl's face, and her beauty, splendid and glowing before, was tender and spiritual now.

and joyous neigh a third time, and I had not the slightest apprehension, for it was impossible to deceive Old Put when he was wide awake.

The horsemen saw us and quickened their pace to a gallop. As they approached I could recognize the Continental buff and blue, and, telling Julia that it was all right, we walked gravely on to meet them. Old Put, his demfin's face became very white, and there onstrations of joy made, followed after with equal sobriety.

They were dashing riders, those men, and more, and begged him not to die. and their curiosity must have been aroused by the sight of the girl, for they rame on at the long, swinging gallop of the good cavalryman and quickly inclosed us.

"Good evening, colonel," I said to the leader, saluting. "I am happy to see you again and to join your com-

But she declined with indignation. "Then you will have Tarleton by "I will not do that," she said. And so Mr. Tarleton is hot on our heels and will dismounted, and we walked on together, attack in the morning? Well, Philip Marcel, I think you will see tomorrow as pretty a little battle as was ever fought on this continent, and neither Colonel Tarleton nor I nor any other can tell yet what the result will be."

Julia was standing by me, and her old spirit suddenly flamed up.

"Miss. Howard," said Colonel Wash-I did not reply, but I was willing to ington, bowing-I had given her name "we have more admiration for the Old Put, who was walking slowly ladies than confidence in their military predictions."

CHAPTER X.

IN MORGAN'S CAMP.

Then we proceeded to the encampment, and Colonel Washington himself went with us, his plans being changed ns at a half gallop. Old Put neighed by my news, My head was buzzing then, and with the freedom of our colo-with excitement. We were going to fight Tarleton at last, though with all the odds against us, numbers, discipline and arms, while Tarleton himself had won his reputation as the ablest and most successful cavalry commander in the British service. We might again experience the disgrace and disaster of Camden, but Morgan was no Gates, and perhaps, on the other hand, we might equal the exploit of the wild borderers at King's Mountain, though it was a little too much to hope for that. But still we would fight, and to a young man it always seems better to fight than

He nodded joyously and then looked gravely at the bandage around my head. "It is nothing," I said. "I will take it off tonight. My head is well."

He nodded again, as if all his troubles were over.

The wife of Captain Dunn of the Fouth Carolina militia was in the camp, a lady whom I knew, my distant kinswoman, and Julia was given into her charge. "Take good care of her, Cousin Anna, " I said. "Remember that she is my prisoner." "Your prisoner, is she?" she replied enigmatically. "But remember, Philip, that the captor often becomes the captive." "Cousin Anna," I said indignantly,

"I hope you are not going to preach our defeat by Tarleton on the very eve of battle. It will have a discouraging ef-

"I said nothing about the battle. Go and attend to your work, Philip. I will take care of the girl."

To Julia I said: "We fight tomorrow, and I may not see you again."

Then I bent down and kissed her lips. She replied very simply and earnestly: "May you live through it, Philip!" Cousin Anna's back was turned, and

was itself the opening of one of the greatest, most skillful and successful campaigns ever conducted on the soil of our continent. We were on a long slope, consisting of several hills rising above each other like the seats of an amphitheater, though at a much greater elevation, as the slope was so slight that it offered no impediment to the gallop of a horse. The men were gathering up old rails, which they were using for the campfires, and I noticed many old tracks of the feet of animals. To my question one of the men said: "We are going to fight where the cows pastured. Don't you know that this army is camped on the cow pens of 2 very worthy man named Hannah? And these rails are the last that are left of his pens."

Behind us flowed the wide, deep and unfordable Broad river, retreat thus being cut off in case of defeat. I asked the meaning of this strange military maneuver which meant either victory or destruction, and again the explanation was ready:

"More than half of our men are militia, and you can never tell whether militia will run like rabbits or fight like devils. All early signs fail, and General Morgan says it's cheaper to have the river behind us and make 'em fight than to station regulars in the rear to shoot down the cowards.

Presently I saw General Morgan himself passing among the men and preparing for the expected attack in the morning. This was one of our real heroes, a fighter and leader and no politician, a man whom the great Washington esteemed and loved to reward. I had seen him at Saratoga and elsewhere, and his figure as well as his name always drew attention. Over six feet high and built in proportion, with a weight of 200 pounds, and a large, fine, open face, he was a type of the true American, the best of all men in mind and body.

There was plenty of provender in the camp, and I gave Old Put the first solid meal that had come to him in several days. I wanted him to be in good trim for the morrow, for he and I were to take our proper place with Washington's cavalry, to which we belonged, only a handful of men, but able and true and capable of doing great things in the nick of time. There had been some question about the bandage on my head, which I wore as a precaution against taking cold in the scalp wound, but I showed that it was only a trifle, and Colonel Washington rightfully remarked that such a slight wound would only increase a man's efficiency on the battlefield. Then he presented me with a fine saber, which I needed badly, and told me to lie down on the ground and go to sleep, but I could not sleep just

The campfires flared up in the cold January darkness. The men sat around them, talking and playing cards with old greasy cards or singing the songs of the hills and the woods. Some of the soldiers were asleep on their blankets or the bare ground, for we were always a ragged and unhoused army at the best, and only a few of the officers had

A sharp breeze came from across the river, and the flames bent to it, their light flickering over wild, brown faces that knew only the open air, wind, rain, hail or whatever came. Most of them still carried their curved and carved powderhorns and their bullet pouches, inseparable companions, over their shoulders, and their long, slender barreled rifles, so unlike the British muskets, lay at their sides.

Smoke rose from the fires and blew in the faces of the men, deepening the brown and giving them another shade of the Indian. A curse mingled now and then with the singing and the talk of the card players, and from the bor- to get all those books together." ders of the camp came the stamp of the horses and an occasional neigh. In the darkness, half lighted by the reeling built all around one room, and he done fires, the camp became a camp of wild men, whose faces the wavering light Times-Herald. molded into whatever grotesque images it chose.

We were but a little army, only 900 strong, but many of us had come great distances and from places wide apart. An arc of 1,000 miles would scarce cover all our homes. There were the militia, South Carolinians and Georgians, raw troops, whom one can never trust; then anapolis Journal. the little remnant of the brigade that De Kalb bad led on the fatal day of Camden, splendid soldiers whose line the whole British army could not break, the survivors now eager to avenge the disgrace their brethren suffered on that day; then the stanch Virginia troops, that we knew would never fail, and near them our two or three score of cavalrymen under Washington-a little army, I say again, but led by such leaders as Morgan, Washington, Howard and Pickens! Down the slopes the sentinels were on watch, but there was no fear of a surprise, for the scouts were just bringing in word that Tarleton could not come before daylight, and then, owing to the slope and the open ground, his approach would be seen for a great distance.

The new men talked the most, some about the coming battle, eagerly, volubly, others about things the farthest from it, but in the same eager, voluble, unreal tone. The veterans were silent mostly, and already with the calm and hardihood of long usage were seeking the rest and sleep which they knew they would need. A tall, thin man, with a wild face, whom I took to be one of the preachers at the great revival meetings so common on the border, cose in the midst of the camp and began to speak. Some listened, and some went on with the talking and card playing. I could hear the rustle of the pasteboard as the cards were shuffled. He was a fighting preacher, for he exhorted them to strike with all their strength in the coming battle and if they must die to die like Christian heroes. He prayed to God for the success of our arms, then stepped down from the stump on which he had stood and disthe front line of the South Carolina Advertising company, Toledo, O. militia the next day.

I sought my own place in our troop and lay down upon one half of my blanket, with the other half above me. Old Put gnawed at some fodder beside

But sleep would not come just yet, and I opened my eyes again to see that the fires were sinking and the darkness was coming down nearer to the earth. Half the men were asleep already; the others were quiet, seeking sleep, and the steady breathing of near 1,000 men in a close space made a strange, whistling noise like that of the wind. A flaring blaze would throw a streak of light across a sleeping soldier, showing only a head or a leg or an arm, as if the man had been disjointed. I would hear the faint rattle of a sentry's firelock and the heavy hoof of a horse as he crowded his comrades for room. An officer in dingy uniform would stalk across the field to see that all was right. and over us all the wind moaned and the darkness gathered close up to the edge of the dying fires. Weakness overpowered my excited brain and nerves, and I slept.

Funeral Sermons and Lauding People to the Skies, and That Ha Would Assail Divorces.

Kokoma, Ind., June 18 .- "When my father and my mother forsake me, then my Lord will take me up." spoke the Rev. E. G. Walk, at the spoke the Rev. E. G. Walk, at the funeral of 4-year-old William Hancock, and the divorced parents, sitting apart, trembled and started at his words. The preacher exclaimed:

"I am heartily tired of preaching funeral sermons and lauding people to the skies. I will assail divorces, and I deplore the fact that so few people properly recognize the sacredness and solemnity of the marriage

WHAT

WOMEN ARE WEARING

material made. Some take a handful of flowers and a little of nothing and make it all into a dream of beauty, and others could take ever so much more valuable things and the result would be a nightmare. The art of good dressing seems thus to be born in one rather than acquired. So the only thing one can do in this case is to find a conscientious dressmaker and trust to her judgment. These sage reflections are the result of seeing too many women in one day.

I sat beside one lady in a public place, and she had a hat that I immediately made a note of. It was a large round hat, made of alternate rows of black neapolitan and fine yellow straw braid as narrow as the finest soutache. The crown was high and the brim wide. In the back the brim was bent down and fastened to the hair by several fine fancy pins. The whole front of the hat was covered with an interspersed with grasses and many loops of narrow black ribbon wired to stand up in irregularly shaped true lovers' knots. In the back of the hat the flowers dwindled down to sprays and the ribbon to loose ends.

It is not very easy for a middle aged woman to find a hat which will not accentuate the fact that she is verging on the forbidden ground. But the black straw and lace effects in the bolero or English walking hats are very good if proper care be taken in the trimming of them.

So much black and white is worn that many a woman adopts this color scheme for not only hats, but for everything else this summer. I have seen some black hats-and very becoming ones they were, too-and there was not one note of color about them, nor did they in the least suggest mourning.

In spite of the attempt to force upon the American women the styles of 1862 and thereabout, the nearest approach has been the hat of the period so far as the shape is concerned, but with ing sleeves with their accompanying undersleeves-yes, and a few flounces. But, then, we always had more or less flounces. The plaited skirts where the into halves, remove the inside neatly. loosened plait is let to form a fullness chop it into bits and add to it small around the bottom of the skirt is one pieces of oranges, strawberries and of the prettiest styles. Others show two rows of lace or fine embroidery as flounces, but these are only for thin summer dresses. There are graduated flounces where the back part is much deeper than the front. Some have flounces set on others at the edge. This always was a favorite way. Even which was shown me today where the whole skirt was made of narrow flounces. Babies and women's bathing and eyeling suits do not show flounces, and that is about all that is exempt. But all these are different.

This is almost the time for surf bathing, and so it is in order to say a few words about the latest in bathing dresses. These vary in length and finish, according to the pleasure of the wearer. The time has gone by when the bather carries her outfit in her locket, and no one can find fault with the present style. A JUNE LUNCHEON.

Some Hints For the Woman With a Country Home.

This is the time of the year when the woman who lives out of town rejoices. Her broad verandas and well kept lawn are a source of envy to her city friends, who have to put up with roof gardens, front door stoops and such poor substitutes. If she is a wise woman, she will repay her social obligations and make friends for the coming winter by giving a lunch or two served in a dainty manner.

She will not make the mistake of having this little feast indoors, but it will be spread in a cool corner of the veranda where the sunlight flickers through a screen of vines or a gayly striped awning. Instead of one large table several small round ones should be used. In the center of each there should be a big bowl of roses drooping gracefully over a mat of ferns. Highly polished tables should be left bare, with the exception of individual doilies under each plate. A dainty touch would be to have these embroidered in

ATHLETICS AND APPETITE. Explain Why the Girl of Today Is So

Divinely Tall. T is a certain fact that modern maidens are much taller and better developed than were their predecessors, and the general idea is that it is because they take so much more outdoor exercise and go in so largely for physical training. That, at any rate, is a very gratifying supposition and probably the true one, though certain prosaic people declare that the physical superiority of modern maids over those who went before is simply because they eat more.

Formerly a gently nurtured damsel was ashamed of acknowledging that she was really hungry and to live upon air than a man does, and she frankly shows her appreciation of a good dinner. That she is the better for a sufficiency of food no one doubts or that it is a very important factor in ber splendid development. Nevertheless 1 think those people are right

Sharp and intense at times In the intervals dull and heavy. Neuralgia is the result of impoverished blood caused by impairment of the nerves-

a lack of nerve force.

It is a disease of the nerve centers, and the pains accompanying it are a prayer for better nourishment. They are the danger signals which warn you against a total collapse of the nervous system.

Liniments and all external applications can only give temporary relief. Permanent cure cannot possibly come until the nerve centers are thoroughy revitalized and reinvigorated by Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills. The beneficial effects of this great nerve restorative are felt thrilling through the nerve fibres as week by week and month by month the nerve force of the body is restored. Roll a Pumpkin.

The Rev. John Haynes was famous for his pithy sayings. At one time, says one of our exchanges, he overheard his daughter and some young friends criticising certain neighbors more severely than was pleasing to him, whereupon he proceeded to read them a lecture on the sinfulness of scandal.

"But, father," remonstrated his daughter, "we must say something" "If you can do nothing better," retorted Mr. Haynes dryly, "get a pumpkin and roll it about. That will be at least an innocent diversion."

Not long afterward a conference of ministers met at his house. During the evening an earnest discussion on certain points of doctrine arose, and, from the lofty pitch of some of the voices, it seemed as if part of the disputants at least were in danger of losing their temper.

At that juncture Mr. Haynes' daughfront of her father and said: "There, from a stock of pure drugs such father, roll it about. Roll it about."
